BCU Archives Copyright Policy

As a repository of original research materials, the BCU Archives (BCUA hereafter) is committed to preserving these materials and making them available for research. In order to facilitate research, the BCU Archive staff and researchers will abide by the following guidelines.

- BCUA staff will provide reproductions of a reasonable amount of material from its collections, provided that such copying is consistent with donor instruction and copyright law.
- BCUA staff will perform all photocopying. Photocopying of materials is generally permitted for specific educational research or reference.
- BCUA staff reserve the right to limit or prohibit reproduction due to the condition of the materials, security reasons, or possible violation of copyright laws.
- It is the researcher’s obligation to satisfy copyright regulations when copying or using materials found in the collection.
- The person requesting the reproduction assumes all responsibility for infraction of copyright and any use exceeding fair use.
- Any commercial application of copyrighted materials is not fair use and always requires the consent of the copyright holder.
- Permission to reproduce is separate from and does not constitute permission to publish. A separate publication agreement must be signed, and a publication fee must be paid. If BCUA is not the copyright owner, permission to publish is required from both the owner of the copyright and the BCUA as owner of the physical property. The BCUA Publication Agreement Form states that permission is granted “for one time only use of the requested materials for publication.” Photographs may not be reused without the written permission of the BCUA. (See our Publication Policy)
- As set forth in section 202 of U.S. Code Title 17, ownership of copyright does not automatically accompany ownership of the physical property. The BCUA Donor Agreement Form states that “The Donor hereby gives an assigns to Bethune-Cookman University all property and copyrights therein, unless otherwise specified in an amendment to this document.” Many of the materials held by BCU Archives have no corresponding Donor Agreement Forms, which means that copyright or other information about restrictions may be difficult or even impossible to determine. In such cases it is solely the responsibility of the researcher to determine and satisfy copyright and other use restrictions.
- Reproductions of any item must contain a complete citation to the original.
- Books, manuscripts, and plays as literary works are protected by copyright; reproduction is governed by standards of fair use. Non-book materials, including audio and video recordings, architectural drawings, artwork, maps, and photographs, are also covered by fair use provisions set forth in section 107 of U.S. Code Title 17.
- Complete copyrighted works or substantial portions thereof will not be duplicated unless they are out of print or no longer available at a fair price.
- Portions of commercially acquired copyrighted works may be copies for instructional purposes, but the amount and substantiality of the portion use in relation to the copyrighted work as a whole must be considered in determining whether the use of the excerpt constitutes fair use.
- As provided in section 108 of U.S. Code Title 17 BCU Archives reserves the right to produce material within its holdings for preservation purposes. This includes digital reproduction.
